CHINA AT WAR

Regions of China, 1937-45

Edited by Stephen R. MacKinnon,
Diana Lary, and Ezra F. Vogel

China at War is a reconsideration of the relations between Japan and China during the years of the Pacific War from Japan's initial infiltration of China through various phases of its occupation of most of the country. Both sides have averted their gaze from these brutal chapters of World War II, for different reasons. Reevaluating the historical record is complicated further by the intense regional and political conflicts raging within China during the same period. The volume examines regional variations in the role that the Japanese played in local politics, economics, and society. Manchuria, Mongolia, Shanghai, Jiangxi, and Yunnan are among the diverse localities in which the wartime experience has received little attention until now. Contributors include Timothy Brook, John Dower, Kubo Toru, Chang Jui-te, Shao Minghuang, Tsukase Susumu, Xie Xueshi, Lu Minghui, Odoric Y. K. Wou, Ju Zhifen, Zhuang Jianping, Wei Hongyun, Frederic Wakeman, Jr., and Peter Merker.
