EXPLAINING ISLAMIC BELIEFS ACROSS CULTURES

This book offers insights as to how Muslims may attempt to explain their religious beliefs to people of other religious faith and cultural traditions.

It documents the writer's personal reflections and experiences in the field of cross-cultural da'wah in a plural society.

It examines the implications of each Islamic Article of Faith, and considers whether there are similar shades of belief in Buddhist, Christian and Hindu faith communities.

It suggests the considerations that may need to be given when attempting to explain Islamic beliefs to others in the light of their respective religious and cultural traditions.
