Former Soviet South Project

Established to promote research on the 'new' states of Central Asia and Transcaucasia, the Former Soviet South Project of the RIIA provides a forum for the dissemination of ideas and information on the domestic and international developments shaping the policies of these countries. The output of the project includes two series of publications: Former Soviet South Papers and Briefings.

The first Former Soviet South Papers are:

Gareth Winrow (Bosphorus University), Turkey in Post-Soviet Central Asia
Analyses the evolution of Turkish political and economic involvement in the Central Asian states from the enthusiasm and optimism of 1991-2 to the realism of the mid-1990s.

Irina Zviagelskaia (Russian Centre for Strategic Research & International Studies), The Russian Policy Debate on Central Asia
Focuses on the main strands of thinking and the principal actors and interest groups influencing Russian policy towards Central Asia.

Peter Craumer (Florida International University), Rural and Agricultural Development in Uzbekistan
A study of the economic, social and environmental factors in contemporary Uzbekistan's rural development and their effects on the economy and society of the country as a whole.

Shirin Akiner (SOAS, London University), The Formation of Kazakh Identity
A study of the fusion of various elements in the formation of contemporary Kazakh identity, which also sets this process in the broader context of post-Soviet nation-building.

Edmund Herzig (RIIA), Iran and the Former Soviet South
An examination of Iran's political, economic and ideological interests in the new states across its northern borders and their responses.
