This book will acquaint the reader with Georgia, one of the most colourful Republics of the Soviet Union. Nature has generously endowed Georgia with humid subtropics of the Black Sea coast, a variety and wealth of mountain forests, succulent upland pastures, bountiful green valleys and innumerable rapid rivers. People come to Georgia for treatment, vacationing and travel. Many health resorts are scattered over the sunny shores of the Black Sea and picturesque mountain valleys. Dozens of paths lead to mountain passes. The numerous mineral springs possess curative properties.

In Soviet time the Georgian people have performed a heroic feat, transforming Georgia from a backward outlying area of the tsarist empire into a flourishing industrial and collective-farm socialist Republic. The authors will guide the reader along the roads of their country, will show its remarkable landscapes and fascinating towns with many carefully preserved old monuments, and will tell about the interesting history of the Georgian people, and their old culture.
