

ROUTLEDGE STUDIES IN THE HISTORY OF IRAN AND TURKEY

The Turkic Peoples in Medieval Arabic Writings

Yehoshua Frenkel

ROUTLEDGE

Contents

Prologue	vii
PART I
Overview	1
1 The Turkic peoples (atrāk) and the Islamic Caliphate	1
2 Slaves and soldiers	1
3 The Turkic tribes in the steppes	3
4 The image of the Turks in 'Abbāsīd-period writings	3
5 Gog and Magog	6
6 Literary ethnicity (shu'ūbiyya)	9
7 The Eurasian steppes in the 'Abbāsīd Geographical Library	11
8 The Iranian Intermezzo	12
9 Aḡud al-Dawla	13
10 The coming of the Eurasian barbarians	14
11 The Saljūqs	16
12 Ibn Ḥassūl: the structure and subject matter of his epistle	18
13 The new image of the Turks	21
14 From al-Makīn ibn al-'Amīd to Mamlūk historiography	24
PART II
Translated sources	39
1 The Eurasian steppes before the Saljūqs	39

vi Contents

a)	Ibn Khurradādhbih: The Central Asian frontiers (ninth century)	39
b)	Ibn Faqīh al-Hamadhānī: On the Turks and their lands	41
c)	Abū Dulaf: Pseudo-travel	54
2	Eurasian Turks and the legitimation of the Saljūqs	60
a)	Ibn al-Dawādārī: A Turkic creation myth	60
b)	al-'Aynī: Genealogy and tribal division	66
c)	Ibn Ḥassūl: The superiority of the Turks over other regiments	68
3	The traditional medieval historical paradigm	83
a)	al-Makīn Jirjis Ibn al-'Amīd: The beginning of the Saljūq dynasty	83
b)	Ibn al-Dawādārī: The history of the Turks	92
	Bibliography	114
	Index	135