

The Changing Map of Asia

A POLITICAL GEOGRAPHY

Edited by

W. GORDON EAST

O. H. K. SPATE

and

CHARLES A. FISHER

It is often said that geography does not change. In truth the geography changes as rapidly as ideas and technologies change; that is, the meaning of geographical conditions changes.

The Changing Map of Asia

Edited by W. G. East,
O. H. K. Spate and Charles A. Fisher

Until recently regarded as the 'unchanging East', Asia nowadays seems to be in a state of incessant and often explosive turmoil. During the twenty years which have elapsed since the first edition of this book appeared in 1950 every major region of the continent has experienced momentous changes, the true significance of which can only be appreciated against the explanatory background of historical forces and geographical realities.

To keep abreast of these changes has necessitated a radical revision of the original text, so much so indeed that of the seven regional chapters in the present edition five are entirely new and three of them are by new contributors. The book, which unites the work of six Political Geographers, reviews the whole continent in a Prologue and an Epilogue and focuses in turn on its seven major geopolitical regions: South-west Asia, India and Pakistan, the Sino-Indian Marchlands, South-east Asia, the People's Republic of China, the Maritime Fringe of East Asia, and Asiatic U.S.S.R.

W. G. East is Professor Emeritus of Geography at Birkbeck College, University of London. O. H. K. Spate is Acting Director of the Research School of Pacific Studies and Professor of Pacific History at the Australian National University and Charles A. Fisher is Professor of Geography at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London.
