About the Author

Being the product of a Europe in war, the author saw both man at his best and at his worst. After surviving the prison camps and the post-war agonies, though educated in Germany, receiving a National literary prize for his Dornberger Hexameter, the author decided to seek out a new country where he could work, dream and hope to be a part of a new and better future for mankind.

Now internationally known, he remains a citizen of Canada living in seclusion, still travelling, writing, teaching the philosophy he has ascribed to for most of his life.
