WORLD MINORITIES

A penetrating account of the plight today and the problems of some of the world's oppressed minorities; a group of concerned authors has combined to shed light on their economic, political, social and human condition.

This book is of importance not only on humanitarian grounds but also on a pragmatic level, in terms of the well-being of the host community and society as a whole. In the words of Gandhi, 'Civilisation is to be judged by its treatment of minorities.'

The editor, Georgina Ashworth, is Research Director of the Minority Rights Group. She has lived, worked and travelled in East and Western Europe, the Middle East, Africa and North America. The Group (36 Craven St., London WC2) has as its aims:

To secure justice for minority or majority groups suffering discrimination, by investigating their situation and publicising the facts as widely as possible, to educate and alert public opinion throughout the world.

To help prevent, through publicity about violations of human rights, such problems from developing into dangerous and destructive conflicts which, when polarised, are very difficult to resolve.

To foster, by its research findings, international understanding of the factors which create prejudices, treatment and group tensions, and helping to promote the growth of a wider conscience regarding human rights.
